MEDIA RELEASE/STATEMENT

Perbadanan Putrajaya (PPj) would like to refer to the comment “Putrajaya Needs Better Public Transport System To Boost Its Population” via Biz Week of The Star dated 17 April 2010.

PPj would like to thank you for your kind interest and opinion on the public transport issue raised in the article. However, we would like to comment on the statement made by Mr. Previndran Singhe regarding the lack of activities and Federal Territory holidays.

As one of the nation’s Federal Territories, Putrajaya celebrates Federal Territory Day on 1st of February every year on a month-long basis. In conjunction with the celebration, PPj organises a number of activities such as Putrajaya Fishing Competition, Pesta Sukan Rakyat, Pesta Sukan Air, Karnival Wow! Putrajaya, Hot air Balloon Fiesta and themed events at our parks.

Besides the Federal Territory celebration, Putrajaya has its fair share of attractions and activities that are organised specifically to cater to its people, both the community as well as visitors. Among these attractions are parks that are themed to cater for different interests, for example Taman Botani, Taman Wetland or Taman Warisan Pertanian, to name a few, as well as those that offer adventurous pursuits such as The Challenge Park or The Equestrian Park.
PPj is seriously promoting Putrajaya as a venue for sports and recreational events in its bid to make the city more vibrant, especially at night. A calendar of events is drawn up yearly to offer a kaleidoscope of interesting events such as Cyclefest & Putrajaya Night Challenge, Putrajaya Futsal Challenge 2010, Putrajaya International Dragon Boat Festival, Flora 2010, Flora Fest, Fishing Competition, Marching Band Street Parade and Putrajaya Waterski World Cup 2010.

(ZAHARA SALAMAT)
Timbalan Pengarah Kanan Perhubungan Awam
b.p. Presiden Perbadanan Putrajaya

Tarikh: 27 April 2010
Putrajaya needs better transport system to boost its population

By EUGENE MAMALINGAM

PUTRAJAYA has been declared the epitome of gracious living by many, but Malaysia’s administrative capital still has some way to go before it can truly be declared a model city.

Assoc. of Valuers, Property Managers, Estate Agents and Property Consultants in the Private Sector (AEPK) president James Wong believes that Putrajaya needs a meaningful transport system to make it more “livable”. This, in turn, will attract the crowds to make it more vibrant, he adds.

“You need a critical mass population to have a meaningful transport system,” he says when contacted by Bernama. “Currently, there’s not large enough a population concentration in Putrajaya.”

According to the website of Putrajaya Holdings Sdn Bhd, the administrative capital’s master developer, Putrajaya’s current population is 46,000. Wong feels that setting up attractions, such as museums and art galleries, was a good way to pull in the crowds. He also notes that it has long been planned for much of the foreign embassies to relocate to Putrajaya but this has yet to happen.

“There was supposed to be a diplomatic enclave in Putrajaya, with the embassies moving there. With the Immigration Department and many government agencies already present there, it would be a good driver for the embassies to relocate,” says Wong.

Putrajaya currently has just one shopping mall – the Alatan. Allana Putrajaya in Precinct 1. Malaysian Association for Shopping and Hospitality Complex Management advisor Richard Chan points out that the population there is not big enough to support a second one.

“Putrajaya is a great place to live. The homes are affordable but there is insufficient infrastructure or commercial activity,” he says. He adds that for a city to be successful, it needs to “recede to its people”. “Cities like Kuala Lumpur have holidays like Federal Territory Day to bring its people. Putrajaya needs to have events like that,” he argues.

Putrajaya is about 25km from Kuala Lumpur. Of CI Richard Ellis Malaysia chief operating director Allen Boo, that is an issue for now.

“It’s well planned and well developed, but the distance is still a problem. I think once people are able to accept it, living there is not a problem. You say there should be more dedicated highways that connect directly to Putrajaya. Currently, the Federal Highway links Putrajaya directly to the Kempegowda Interchange.

“It’s not that we don’t have enough highways, but why not have other dedicated highways that link to Bangsar or Petaling Jaya?” he asks. “Also, if there should be more private sector participation in the development of Putrajaya.

“Putrajaya has to be more private developers rather than GCL (government-linked companies). Right now, Putrajaya looks like it’s GCL driven,” he adds.

Wong agrees that there should be more private companies undertaking development projects in Putrajaya. He says: “Putrajaya Holdings needs to open up more land and invite private developers to come in.”

Later in the week, it was reported that Putrajaya Holdings would be calling for tenders for projects worth over RM1bil.

Chief executive officer Dato’ Asad Abdul Karim said the tenders were to help fund the $10.8mil project to build four office towers worth a combined RM720mil, residential properties, and offices. He said the report, which was given to shareholders, was based on a feasibility study. In the report, companies such as Tun Abdul Razak Resources Bhd, Jho Corp Bhd, Sunway Holdings Bhd, the UBM Group and Tetra Corp Bhd were listed as the companies interested in the project.

It was also noted that the project should be a more private sector participation in the development of Putrajaya.